Course Description: Massage V

This course offers a hands-on exploration of massage therapy practice. Each week introduces a massage modality (such as reflexology, reiki, acupressure, and hydrotherapy) paired with a common injury or condition, connecting protocol development, intake questions, and muscle identification directly to that week's technique work. Students will build body mechanics, self-care practices, and clinical reasoning skills throughout the term.

Through this clinical approach to massage therapy, students will learn to develop individualized treatment protocols and apply their knowledge and skills in practical, hands-on settings.

While enrolled in this course, students are eligible to sign up for Massage Clinic hours and will have the opportunity to apply their learning by providing massage therapy to members of the public in the student clinic. Massage 5 students are strongly encouraged to participate in Student Clinic shifts to fulfill the required contact hours.

Course Objectives

Upon successful completion of the course, the student will be able to do the following:

- Demonstrate an enhanced understanding of body mechanics.
- Demonstrate effective home self-care strategies.
- Integrate new massage modalities and techniques.
- Develop treatment planning skills through massage protocols.
- Demonstrate proficiency in body assessments
- Utilize massage techniques and tools.

Course Structure

Each class period follows a consistent format: a body-centering meditation, an introductory concept, a lecture on the day's topics and associated injury/condition (with related muscles), an instructor demonstration, guided partner practice. Body regions are covered in sequence across the term, starting at the feet and progressing upward.

The final two weeks of the term (Weeks 9–10) are reserved for the final project.

New content is explored each week in class, and through readings and videos linked in Canvas.

Attendance Policy

Courses in the Massage Therapy Program offer contact hours accrued toward Oregon State's educational requirement for massage licensure. Attendance is mandatory, and only one missed class is permitted.* If a second absence occurs and the student communicates with the instructor in a timely manner, it may be possible to account for lost hours with a make-up assignment, at the instructor's discretion.

*The first class is mandatory; an automatic administrative drop occurs if not present.

Three (3) missed classes result in an automatic No Pass.

Students are expected to arrive on time. Late arrivals (15 minutes or more) are noted, and three (3) late arrivals are recorded as one absence.

If a student is asked to leave the classroom by an instructor, this counts as an absence for the day.

See the Massage Program Student Handbook for full attendance and participation policies.
